Sources: Stats NZ (NZ exports) · QIA (Korea quarantine) · KSTAT (Korea customs)

ROLLING YEAR (OCT-SEP): NZ exports to Korea ▲ 7.8% vs prior season

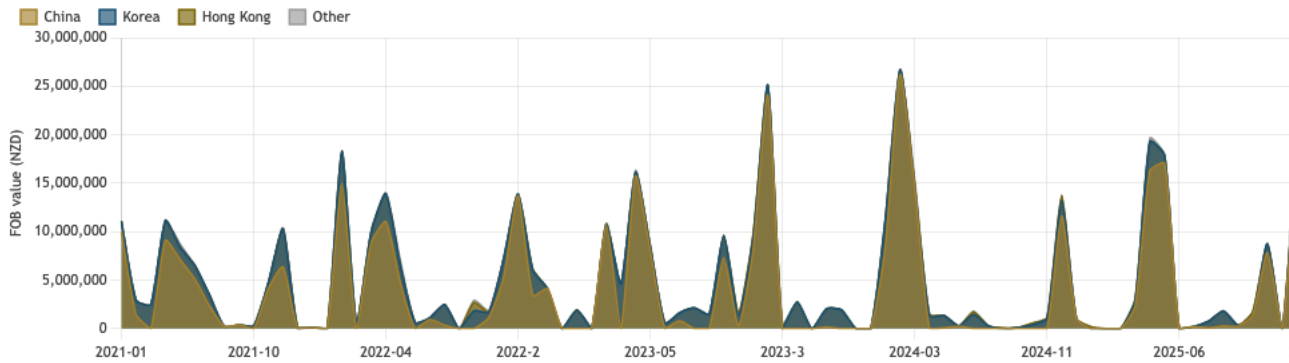

Volume – monthly and rolling 12-month (dried-equivalent kg)

All volumes are shown as dried-equivalent kg. Conversion applied: fresh/frozen velvet × 0.33 = dried-equivalent kg. Dried velvet requires no conversion.

Export destination breakdown

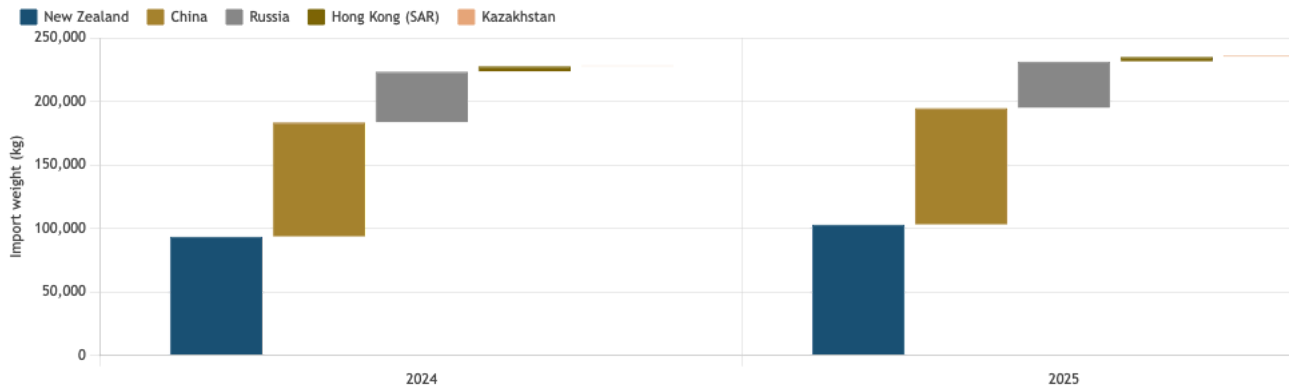

NZ velvet exports by destination – FOB value (NZD)

Source: Stats NZ. All available months shown. Countries not individually listed are grouped as Other.

Korean market – imports by origin

South Korean velvet imports by origin – QIA quarantine records (kg)

Source: Animal and Plant Quarantine Agency (South Korea). Volumes shown as raw import kg as recorded at quarantine inspection. No dried-equivalent conversion applied.

① Why do the three sources show different volumes?

Why the three sources show different volumes

NZ exports (Stats NZ) records shipments at the point of export from New Zealand.

Korea quarantine (QIA) records physical arrivals at Korean ports, inspected upon landing.

Korea customs (KSTAT) records formal customs declarations filed upon import clearance.

Four factors cause the figures to differ:

- Timing. Sea freight from New Zealand to Korea takes approximately two to three weeks. An NZ shipment recorded in October may appear in the QIA and KSTAT data in November.
- Transit and re-export. New Zealand also exports velvet to China, Hong Kong, and Taiwan. Some of that product is subsequently re-exported to Korea and appears in QIA and KSTAT data without a matching NZ-to-Korea export record.
- Classification codes. New Zealand and Korea both revised the official product codes used to classify deer velvet in 2022. Data recorded before and after that change may not align perfectly across the boundary.
- Fresh/frozen versus dried weight. Korea quarantine (QIA) records fresh/frozen and dried velvet volumes separately. Korea customs (KSTAT) records a combined kg total. A standard conversion factor (0.33 kg dried = 1 kg fresh/frozen) is applied to make volumes comparable, but rounding and mixed shipments introduce small residual differences.

These differences are not data errors. They reflect the different measurement points and classification systems of three independent agencies.

Import intelligence Last updated: 2026-04-17

Korea deer velvet import data drawn from two MFDS (Ministry of Food and Drug Safety, Korea) sources: annual herbal medicine channel statistics and food ingredient import notifications. See table footnote for full attribution.

○ Annual price data will appear here once available.

Source: Korea Ministry of Food and Drug Safety import notification database. Importer names translated from Korean using curated lookup; exporter names appear as recorded in MFDS source data.

① Why do different sources show different import volumes?

Why the chart and table show different figures

Two separate Korean government data sources appear in this section. They cover different import channels — the numbers are not directly comparable, and neither is wrong.

The chart (MFDS annual statistics) records deer velvet imported into Korea as a herbal medicine or pharmaceutical ingredient. This is a distinct regulatory channel governed by Korea's pharmaceutical authority. Figures show total annual value in USD, 2004–2024.

The records table (MFDS food import notifications) records deer velvet imported as a food ingredient. These are individual shipment notifications filed under Korea's food safety system, 2016–2026.

Two further points to note:

- A third channel exists — sliced velvet imported as a food supplement under a separate product classification — which neither source covers. Total Korean deer velvet imports are therefore higher than either source shows alone.
- NZ supplied 66% of Korea's herbal medicine channel imports by value in 2024 (USD 18.5 million of USD 28.0 million total).

Market presence — coming in the next phase

Product registry data from Korean retail and food-service channels will appear here. This section will show brand presence, product formats, and retail distribution across the Korea market.
